The U.S. unsealed charges filed in January 2016 against 33-year old Canadian resident Abdullahi Ahmed Abdullahi. Abdullahi, who previously resided in San Diego, California and Minneapolis, Minnesota, was charged with two counts of providing material support to IS and one count of aiding and abetting. The indictment alleges that between 2013 and 2014, Abdullahi and Douglas McCain trained with firearms and raised funds for IS foreign fighters in Syria, including the financing of their own travel to Syria. The conspiracy reportedly included 14 individuals in the U.S., Canada, Turkey, and Syria. The co-conspirators exhorted others to finance IS by “commit[ing] crimes against the kuffar [non-Muslims]”: Abdullahi allegedly robbed a jewelry store in Edmonton, Canada to garner funds for the plot. As a result of Abdullahi’s efforts, Douglas McCain and four other co-conspirators traveled to Syria and joined IS between November 2013 and November 2014.
